The more you drink, the more coordination you lose.
That's a fact, plain and simple.

It's also a fact that 12 ounces of beer, 5 ounces of wine and 1 1/4 ounces of spirits all have the same alcohol content. And consumed in excess, all can affect you. Still, people drink too much and then go out and expect to handle a car.

When you drink too much, you can't handle a car.
You can't even handle a pen.

Commentary

Censorship. What does the word mean to you? The definition I've come to believe states "the pulling of books or other materials for foolish reasons."

Recently, an afterschool special addressed the issue of censorship and morality in schools. Now, I'm not one to sit around watching afternoon T.V., but I thought it was ironic to see such a special following the hot-and-steamy scenes of a soap opera. Anyway, on the program Huckleberry Finn was almost banned from a school because it "showed blacks in an inferior fashion and was demeaning to them." Oh? Why, because it depicted people as they may have been during the time period the book was written? Or is it because of the "racism"? Hardly. Like I said, the people are depicted as some people were back then, and this depiction is not unusual nor unreasonable.

Some other items that have been challenged are: The Catcher in the Rye - long the subject of debate and outlawed in many school districts; Anne Frank's Diary of a Young Girl because of sexual implications; East of Eden, Grapes of Wrath ("dangerous"), Of Mice and Men, Red Pony - all by John Steinbeck, one of America's greatest authors; Merchant of Venice ("anti-semitic"); and of course Uncle Tom's Cabin because it uses the word "nigger." The list by no means stops here.

I don't know how others feel about the whole business, but it does bring up some interesting questions. Do we edit history textbooks simply because someone is offended or because someone might be reminded of a past they would rather forget? Well, history happened, and nothing can ever change that. Is the fact that many people during the Middle Ages blamed the Jews for the Black Plague offensive? Why, because it is anti-semitic? Sure it was, but it was also ridiculous. Nonetheless, the fact remains that at the time some people felt that way, and should this fact be blacked out to "protect" our minds because someone is offended? I think not. Then there is the issue of so-called pornography.

Ranging from "Playboy" to adult films, the "pornography" is under fire, and this fire is being met with mixed reactions. Personally, I find "True-to-life Detective" and similar magazines with titles such as "I was ravaged by bikers from outer space" much more offensive (if only to my intelligence) than probably even an adult film. Stores removed "Playboy" from their shelves as well as an issue of "American Photographer" which showed a (gasp!) bare breast! Come on, A.P. is a hobby magazine! Oh, and by the way, "Sports Illustrated's" swimsuit issue is anti-Christian and pornographic, says the National Federation of Decency.

There is a story I read once that tells of a man and his mistress who are travelling. The man is invited to stay in the home of an old man. While there, several boys attack the house, demanding "Let us have the visitor, we want to have sex with him." The host refuses, but the man presents the boys with his mistress, whom the boys have sex with all night and then abuse her until daybreak. Later, the man takes the mistress home and cuts her up into twelve pieces and mails the pieces all over the country. Pretty distasteful, and pretty offensive in my opinion.

Where did I read this tale? Anyone can read it. It's found in Judges 19: 19-30. Yes, the Bible, and although I am a Christian I cannot believe that other Christians can decide for the rest of Christendom what is good or tasteful.

Part of our country's foundation is built on the principles of freedom of expression, speech, and press, as long as the use of these rights does not interfere with national security. Cinderella, contested because it attributes magic to beings other than God, hardly threatens anything.

Letters To The Editor

Qualified Teachers

Dear Editor,

This letter is in reference to letters printed in the Flyer News Magazine, Vol. XIV, Issue No. 6. I feel sorry for folks like James Rogers and others that think like him. It is sad that people still think that if more Afro-American (Black) teachers are hired at Salisbury State College, the quality of education would deteriorate. I think it would improve. We do not want our young adults (our future) taught by unqualified teachers of any color or race.

Next, I commend the Black Student Union of SSC for their assertiveness. They have my support (financial support also). Not all Afro-Americans that want to go to college can afford it, so those that are there need to use their mental strength to fight moral, economic, political, and other worthwhile issues. Use your physical strength to good and your spiritual strength to keep you going. Please never stoop to your opponents level. The issues you fight for did not die in the 60's. Some people still think they need to define and determine for others. BSU set your goals high, you will achieve them.

Finally, in order for the BSU to be strong and continue to be functioning you must groom people to take the place of the officers, when they graduate or leave. Leave nothing to chance, plan and prepare for your future. Keep up the good work. Your cause is our cause.

Sincerely,
Mary Ashanti

Myths And Symbols

Dr. John S. Major, director of New York Lecture Program for the Asia Society, presents a lecture entitled, "Chinese Myths and Symbols," on Thursday, February 26, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium at Salisbury State College.

The lecture, part of the College's year-long cultural events series, "China: Tradition and Transformation," is sponsored by the Faculty Cultural Events Committee and the SSC Foundation, Inc. Like all programs in the series, the lecture is free and open to the public.

"Myths, in any culture, are good stories," said Dr. Major, "but they are also much more. Myths serve to conserve and transmit, through an oral tradition, a culture's essential understanding of the nature of reality. They function simultaneously on several levels of understanding, from the overt to the arcane."

"China's ancient myths tell tales of emperors and demons, of floods and battles; they also, on a deeper level, describe the shape of heaven and earth, the paths of the sun and planets across the sky and the reasons things are so," continued Dr. Major. "Symbols linked to these myths (such as the emblematic beasts of the four directions) reinforce the message."

"The true subject of this illustrated lecture, then," added Dr. Major, "is the world-view of ancient China, a world-view that underlies the whole field of Chinese philosophy and cosmology."

Dr. Major received his Ph.D. in History and East Asian Languages at Harvard. As a graduate student, he lived for one year in Taiwan and two years in Japan. Upon his return, he joined the faculty of Dartmouth College, where he taught Chinese and Japanese history from 1971-1984.

While at Dartmouth, Dr. Major travelled extensively throughout Asia, including another year's residence in Japan, most of a year in Indonesia, and six trips to the People's Republic of China. During 1981-82 he was a Visiting Fellow at Clare Hall, Cambridge University.

In December 1984, Dr. Major became director of the China Council of the Asia Society, a national educational program dedicated to increasing American awareness of and understanding of China and Sino-American relations. In 1986, Dr. Major moved to his new assignment as director of New York Lecture Programs.

Dr. Major's main field of academic research is the history of traditional Chinese science and cosmology. He has published numerous articles on a wide range of Asian topics, from the origins of Chinese science to contemporary Japanese textiles. He is the co-author or editor of three books: The Hall of Heavenly Records: Korean Astronomical Instruments and Clocks, 1380-1780: Myth and Symbol in Chinese Tradition; and China Briefing 1985. He has lectured throughout the United States on recent trends in Chinese culture and society.

TRADITION AND TRANSFORMATION

Fashion And Costume

Dr. Valerie Steele, author of numerous articles on the history of fashion, presents a lecture entitled, "Chinese Fashion and Costume," on Wednesday, February 25, at 7:30 p.m. in Caruthers Hall Auditorium at Salisbury State College.

The Lecture, part of the College's year-long cultural events series, "China: Tradition and Transformation," is sponsored by the Faculty Cultural Events Committee and the SSC Foundation, Inc. Like all programs in the series, the lecture is free and open to the public.

Dr. Steele, who earned her Ph.D. in History from Yale University in 1983, said the lecture will present an overview of traditional Chinese costume and a more detailed examination of changes in clothing and fashion in China during the 20th century.

"In traditional societies, such as pre-modern China," said Dr. Steele, "upper-class clothing tended to be characterized by richness of materials and ornamentation and by strict symbolic identification of status within a stratified society. The design of the clothing changed relatively slowly over long periods of time."

"After the 1911 revolution," continued Dr. Steele, "Chinese clothing was strongly influenced by Western styles and became characterized by fashion in the modern sense, including rapid changes in style and a weakening of class symbolism. The woman's qipao and the man's 'Sun Yat-sen suit' represented inspired compromises between traditional Chinese styles and modern Western dresses and suits."

"From the 1950s until the death of Mao in 1976," added Dr. Steele, "Chinese dress constituted mainly of a drab proletarian 'uniform.' In recent years, however, fashion has made a dramatic comeback, in accordance with the current political line that to try to look beautiful is not incompatible with citizenship in a socialist nation."

The lecture will be illustrated by slides. For more information about this or other "China" series programs, call (301) 543-NEWS.

Cooper To Be Featured In Recital

Dr. Nancy Joyce Cooper, a member of the music faculty of Salisbury State College, will be featured in a College-sponsored faculty recital at Asbury United Methodist Church on Tuesday, February 24, at 8 p.m. The program will feature works by Bach, Hindemith, Messiaen and Dupre, and is free and open to the public.

Dr. Cooper conducted the College Concert Choir for two semesters, and is now in her third semester directing the SSC Collegium. Dr. Cooper founded this group in the spring of 1986, to sign a cappella music of the Baroque and pre-Baroque. The group has performed at Pemberton Hall's Colonial Fair and on the Downtown Plaza as part of the "Dickens of a Christmas" program and at the Salisbury Festival.

Dr. Cooper received her Master's and Doctor of Musical Arts degrees from the Eastman School of Music. While at Eastman, she received both the Performer's Certificate and the Artist's Diploma in organ. The latter is the highest award in performance given by the Eastman faculty; Dr. Cooper was the first performer on any instrument to receive the diploma in over 10 years.

Dr. Cooper maintains an active recital schedule. In 1986 she gave concerts in New York City, Charlottesville and Virginia Beach, VA, and San Antonio, TX. In January of 1987 she played on the inaugural series of new organs in Eastville, VA and New Bern, NC. She has scheduled performances at Longwood Gardens, Kennett Square, PA in March and at the National City Christian Church in Washington, D.C., in April.

In addition to her responsibilities at the College, Dr. Cooper is the organist and choir director at St. Peter's Episcopal Church in Salisbury.

Acting Athletic Director Dean Burroughs stated that McGlinchey took the position with the 0-10 Central Presently, a search committee is accepting applications for the vacant head coach position. They will accept these applications until March 4th, and chose a new coach sometime during that month. Meanwhile, assistant coach Rotelleni will handle off season training exercises.

The question remains-Will the Gulls maintain their successful record under a new head coach? If they are to do so, they must remember the words of coach McGlinchey: "Persistence is the real measure of success."

An Opening Dedication For SSC Rugby

Dear Players, Friends, Fans and Fanatics:

Water seeks its own level so they say, and this seems to be the case for SSC Rugby. As a team, we all connect on a certain level of consciousness even though we are of highly assorted backgrounds. Those of us who have played before exist for that opportunity to play at least one more time because in Rugby we have found faith in the human race. We have also found not only an excellent form of exercise, but experience in working on a team which must function as a team to survive and win. We of SSC Rugby are also proud of the fact that our team has existed and thrived without the need for a formal coaching staff - with the exception of the advice freely given to us by Dr. Schaefer and Dr. Davis (Thank you very much!). It is a student run sports club.

SSC Rugby believes in good, clean hard hitting ball and we always look forward to the post-game celebration with the other team. It is an opportunity to show that even though we give and ask no quarter on the field, after the game both teams are (usually) still friends with a mutual respect.

Being friends with the other team adds a unique quality of sportsmanship to our game.

However, contrary to popular campus belief we are not all drunken alcoholics (arguable), drug-crazed hippies (only dopes smoke dope!), women abusers or underscholastically achieving young adults. We are, therefore, athletes and scholars in need of a game that tests not only personal strength, courage, mettle, coordination and endurance, but team work and mental dexterity as well, while not interfering with our scholastic progress due to rigid practice schedules as other sports might.

To us, it's a fact that no matter how we live our lives, Rugby will always be in our blood and hopefully we will be able to continue to play ball.

Rugby- its not just a game and its not a social disease, its a way of life, and I am personally very proud to be a part of our team here at SSC and look forward to our spring season and the support of our many fans and new players.

SIHC Soon To Disband

By Dana Alexander

The Special Interest Housing Committee of Salisbury State College met at the end of last semester to discuss whether or not to remain functioning due to the few successes of the committee within its four years of existence. It was recently decided to submit a proposal to Dr. Carol Williamson, Dean of Students, that requested the end of Special Interest Housing. As of yet, the proposal has not been submitted.

found in the French Cluster, or La Maison Francaise. From Fall 1985 to the present, this cluster has been made up of eight, French speaking females who speak the language with one another as a part of their daily lives and who share the French culture with their fellow Chesapeake residents by sponsoring and participating in food tastings, film presentations, and French Club meetings and activities.

Some of the concerns of participants of SIHC was whether or not they would lose their housing and lose the interest

The SIHC was originally formed to fulfill the needs of students who had a common interest and wished to share this interest with the campus community. An example of this is

WSCL Reaches $35,000 Goal

Mark Handley, General Manager of WSCL, the public radio station based at Salisbury State College, today announced that the station has successfully completed its first fund raiser. In December a skeletal staff and a few interested volunteers began an effort to raise $35,000 which was needed to get WSCL on the air by summer. According to Handley, "The support shown by the community has been overwhelming. We felt sure we could make our goal, but to do so in only a little more than a month was a real morale boost to all of us."

Individuals who helped the station include Mrs. Elizabeth Bellavance and Dr. Andrejs Strauss, who led a group of volunteers in making personal contacts on behalf of the station. "The support shown by community volunteers is as important as the money raised," according to Handley. "Although the station will have a small professional staff, it will always rely heavily on volunteers for everything from fund raising to on-air announcing and equipment operation."

The station has also just completed hiring of its professional staff. Mark Handley, General Manager and Bruce Blanchard, Director of Engineering have been with the project since its inception two-and-a-half years ago. Pam Schiller was added as Traffic and Office Manager. Pam has lived in Wicomico County for eighteen years and has held positions at Peninsula Food equipment and as Executive Director of the Coastal Board of Realtors.

In January Kenneth Basile joined the

With staff and funding firmly in place for this year, the station now begins the construction and installation of equipment with the hope of getting on the air this Spring or Summer. "Although there is much yet to be done," according to Handley, "we now have the community support and a and asked for input, as well as questions concerning how the cluster, themselves, felt. He expressed a lot of caring and assured the clusters that they would remain where they are and were free to continue their projects; they would just be avoiding the paperwork of the SIHC. Mr. King also stressed the point that if there are students, like the Little Sisters of Minerva and La Maison Francaise, who wished to live together and contribute to the college community, the door of the Housing Department would always be open.

Since the announcement, extensive interviews of candidates for the position of dean had been conducted. "This combination fits perfectly with our goals for the new Perdue Business School, one of which is to develop a close relationship between business education and the application of business skills in the workplace."

Frank Perdue said, "The first major goal of the School of Business at Salisbury State was to find the right dean. In Timothy Mescon we have found such an individual. I enthusiastically welcome him to our community. I am sure his background and dynamism will make a major contribution to the growth of our school in the years ahead."

He began teaching at the University of Miami School of Business in 1982 and during his time there has received the School's Alumni Award of Excellence in Teaching. Prior to this, he was an assistant professor in the College of Business at Arizona State University in Tempe. He also has been a guest lecturer at the University of Aston in Birmingham, England.

Dr. Mescon is the author of more than 70 articles and cases in academic and business journals, and is a contributing editor to Sky, the in-flight magazine of Delta Air Lines. His first full-length text, "Cases in Strategic Management An Industry Perspective," will be published next year by Harper & Row. In addition to his prolific writing, he is a frequent speaker before industry and business groups on management-related topics.

Dr. Mescon is also active in many government, business and civic organizations. He is the recipient of the 1984 National Award for Excellence from the United States Small Business Administration, sits on the Commercial Panel of Arbitrators of the American Business Council of America.
